7 次の英文は、筆者であるミチコ (Michiko) がアメリカにホームステイしたときの話です。 これを読んで、あとの問いに答えなさい。

Fifteen years ago, I did a *homestay with an old woman for two months in America. Her name was Jean. Jean was a music teacher when she was young. She could play the piano and the guitar very well. Also, she was a good singer. So, we sometimes enjoyed singing together. She was eighty years old, but she could drive a car. We went shopping and visited many famous and beautiful places by car. She also cooked delicious dinners for me. She lived *alone, so she was the only member of my *host family. But she had many friends, so I could talk with a lot of people. I had a lot of *experiences with Jean and her friends.

During my homestay, Jean often said to me, "You are a member of the family. I hope you will try to do a lot of *housework." I washed the dishes, and *watered the flowers. I sometimes tried to answer the *phone. I couldn't speak English very well, so it was not easy. One day, I made ①a big mistake. I answered a phone call from Jean's friend, Bob. He said, "Hi, Michiko! Can I speak to Jean?" Jean wasn't in the living room then. I said, "T'm sorry. She is in the toilet now." *Suddenly, Bob started to *laugh. "Why is he laughing?" I thought.

Soon Jean came back to the living room and started to talk with Bob. When she finished talking with him, she smiled and said to me, "②Oh. no! Michiko, I wasn't in the toilet! I was in the bathroom." In the U.S, the word "toilet" doesn't mean the small room. I learned an important thing from this experience.
