

Library Guidance was put into effect!

First year high school students put “Library Guidance” into effect for Japanese class. First, a librarian named Ms. Nakamura explained how to properly use the library. After that, Japanese teacher; Mrs. Akao introduced about material of Nagasaki and books which are useful for studying certain subjects. She said “Please follow the regulations when you use the library.” Some students said “I was surprised that this school has several times as the amount of books as my junior high school had”, “After this I want to use the library more actively when we study various subjects and during Nagasaki Time.”

We are now learning about Copy Rights!

Now students are learning about copy rights in information class. Copy rights are one of the intellectual property rights that a writer possesses. Information class teacher; Mrs. Katsuno said “It is necessary to protect information and to know how to quote the Copyright Act. I hope that they reflect about it in their reports.” Some students said “I didn’t know about any kinds of copy rights”, “I want to form a proper report from now on.”

Students are earnestly taking notes in the class
